Roundworms

Roundworms are the biggest concern for puppies because they can be passed on from the mother during pregnancy or through her milk after birth.

Roundworms can cause digestive upsets, poor growth and a pot bellied appearance. In young puppies a worm infestation can be potentially life threatening.

Roundworms are zoonotic and can cause disease in human, especially children which can even lead to blindness.

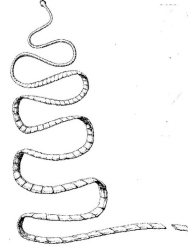

We recommend that you treat your puppy every month until it is 6 months old. Why not book a nurse appointment, so we can weigh your puppy and discuss any concerns or queries that you may have?

There is no treatment available to PROTECT your dog against worms therefore regular dosing every 3 months is vital.

We will need an accurate weight for your dog in order to dispense the correct dosage of worming treatment.

Tapeworms

Your dog will pick up tapeworms whilst scavenging and hunting wildlife. They can also get tapeworms from fleas therefore it is important to treat for fleas as well.

Tapeworms can be identified when the egg packets are passed out in your dog's faeces and stick to the fur around the anus - they look like grains of rice & move around spreading eggs!

Tapeworms don't at first cause any signs in your dog; however, it can be rather unpleasant for you.
